MEMORIALS of the COUNTIES of ENGLAND.

General Editor—REV. P. H. DITCHFIELD, M.A., F.S.A. The design of this series of Memorials of English Counties is not to present a detailed and exhaustive record of the history of each county, but to afford a continuous view of the country life in each shire, especially in its most significant periods, from the earliest time to the present day, and to describe the special features of historical interest for which the county is remarkable. Each Volume contains an historical sketch of the county, a record of its abbeys, castles, and historic houses, its municipal histories, biographies of its illustrious sons, the annals of its great families, battles fought within its borders, architectural descriptions of its principal churches, its legends and folklore, and is edited by some well-known antiquary and historian. The various chapters are entrusted to eminent writers, who, by their learning, research, and literary excellence, are especially qualified to write upon the subjects which, by careful study, they have made their own. An important feature of each book is the series of admirable illustrations with which it is adorned. Demy 8vo, cloth extra, gilt top. Price 15/- each net.

"Messrs. Bemrose's famous series of books dealing with the archæology of English Counties. Printing, illustrations, and matter leave nothing to be desired."—Daily Graphic.

"A series that has throughout maintained a very high level."—Tribune.
